

MITCHELL INSTITUTE SENIOR FELLOW

Kevin Billings, is founder and CEO of Legation Strategies. He was appointed by President George W. Bush to serve as Assistant Secretary of the United States Air Force for Installations, Environment and Logistics where his responsibilities included the world-wide management and direction of the Air Force's $38 billion installations, logistics, environment, and energy programs. His experience has been multi-dimensional in terms of strategic management, international and domestic business operations, transformation and change management.

As part of his corporate experience he co-led a multi-divisional acquisition project and secured $1.5 billion in financing from international participants, developed a successful acquisition plan for a $2 billion energy company, and created a multifunctional marketing and US government operations business model for a global aerospace and industrial company headquartered outside the United States. Kevin is an Honourary Group Captain in the Royal Air Force and is a member of the historic 601 (County of London) Squadron RAuxAF, which was reestablished as the advisory group to the RAF Chief of the Air Staff. Additionally, Kevin serves as a member of a number of corporate and nonprofit boards.
