

Research Analyst

The Mitchell Institute for Aerospace Studies

Christopher Byron is a research analyst at the Mitchell Institute for Aerospace Studies.

Background: Christopher is a recent graduate with a Master's in International Security from George Mason University's Schar School of Policy and Government. As a research analyst, he supports the Mitchell Institute's research on a range of topics. Prior to joining the Mitchell Institute, Christopher interned with the Hudson Institute's Hamilton Commission on Securing America's National Security Innovation Base, as well as with two House representatives. He is also a former Civil Air Patrol cadet and wishes to continue contributing to public knowledge and appreciation of the role airpower plays in American security and prosperity.

Areas of Focus: Grand Strategy, Military Analysis, and South Asia Security Challenges.

Academic and Professional Titles: Christopher received his undergraduate degree from Florida International University in 2019, majoring in International Relations. In 2022, he received an MA in International Security with a concentration in Intelligence from George Mason University.
